Office: Office Hours: By appointment

I. Course Description:

This course is designed to develop students' knowledge of the grammatical and syntactic structure of both source and target languages, through close reading and careful analysis of selected passages from Chinese classics and Buddhist texts in different genres. In the Seminar, students will read, interpret, and translate selected texts. They will discuss the vocabulary and sentence structures of primary sources. They will also develop appreciation for texts through reading assigned and self-selected materials, guided by explanations and in-depth discussion to clarify the meaning and significance of text passages when needed. The Reading Seminar allows students to engage in shared inquiry as they study primary sources both in their source language as well as in multiple existing translations.

II. Course Goals and Outcomes:

a. Program Learning Outcomes:

PLO 2. Articulate insights gained from major Buddhist methods and practices, close reading, and translation of texts and their implications for the personal, social, and natural worlds.

b. Course Outcomes:

Students will learn to:

Analyze the grammatical and syntactic and literary and poetic structure of written works. both source and target languages in translated texts.

Interpret and render translations of assigned passages from materials

Engage in thoughtful dialogue with others to gain an understanding of assigned texts and their implications for the personal, social, and natural worlds

III. Format and Procedures

Attendance and Participation: Attendance is required at all classes. Because our pedagogy is based on shared inquiry, students' attendance and class participation is essential to our success as a community of learners. Absence from or tardiness to any class session will be reflected in your final course grade.

Discussion: Classroom time will consist of reading and analyzing selected texts and lectures on the grammatical structure of sentences, combined with individual and collaborative translation work. Students will prepare and share work with the class.

Discussion Leading: You will be asked to lead or co-lead a discussion on some part of a text. To do this, be prepared to present thought-provoking questions and comments that will enable the class to fruitfully discuss the important points of that week's reading.

Translation Lab: Students will practice rendering the Chinese or Buddhist texts into English translations in both individual and group settings.

Final Translation Project: Students will translate a longer portion of text.

IV. Course Requirements:

Course Materials ·

Course Reader (to be provided for the class)

Supplemental handouts (to be given out in class)

Electronics policy

While technology (computers, cell phones, tablets) use is generally not allowed in DRBU classes, students in this course will be allowed to use devices in the lab section and in class for research and communication only for the purposes of translation-related activities. Please respect guest lecturers and those speaking in class discussions by paying full attention and not misusing technology.

Academic Dishonesty and Plagiarism

You are responsible for submitting your own original work. Plagiarism includes copying passages from someone else's work, using someone else's insights without acknowledgement, or paraphrasing another's original phrases without acknowledgement. Using someone else's words or ideas without proper citations will affect your grade or result in failing the course. Be sure that you provide complete citations for any material that helps shape your translations, even if you are paraphrasing another person's text in your own words. Papers that do not meet academic standards for citation may not be credited for the course and, if plagiarism is a concern, may be reported to the Program Director.

Disability Services

The Office of Disability Services has been designated by the University as the primary office to guide, counsel, and assist students with disabilities. If you already receive services through the Office of Disability Services and require accommodations for this class, make an appointment with me as soon as possible to discuss your approved accommodation needs. Please bring your accommodation letter with you to the appointment. Your professors will hold any information you share with them in the strictest confidence unless you give them permission to do otherwise. If you have not contacted the Office of Disability Services and need accommodations, your professors will be happy to refer you.
